Simply memorizing word lists is ineffective for long-term vocabulary growth. Focus instead on learning collocations (words that frequently appear together, e.g., "make a decision," not "do a decision") and idiomatic expressions (phrases with figurative meanings, e.g., "raining cats and dogs").

- Use Context: Learn words within their context rather than in isolation. Read widely and note down unfamiliar words, paying attention to their usage in the sentence.
- Vocabulary Building Resources: Utilize online resources like vocabulary.com, Memrise, or Quizlet, tailoring your studies to specific needs, such as improving academic vocabulary or business English.

- Focus on Error Correction: Identify your common grammatical errors and work diligently to eliminate them. Use online grammar checkers and seek feedback from native speakers or proficient English teachers.

Developing Academic Writing Skills

Academic writing demands precision, clarity, and a formal tone. Practice writing essays, research papers, and other academic texts. Focus on developing strong arguments, using evidence effectively, and adhering to citation conventions (e.g., MLA, APA).
