The Public Marilyn vs. Norma Jeane: Constructing a Persona

Marilyn Monroe wasn't born Marilyn Monroe; she was Norma Jeane Mortenson. This name change itself represents a crucial element of "My Little Secret." The public Marilyn was a meticulously crafted persona, a blonde bombshell designed to sell films and embody a specific ideal of femininity in the 1950s. This deliberate creation of a public identity is a key aspect of understanding the phrase "My Little Secret." It speaks to the chasm between her carefully curated public image and the private woman she strove to protect from the ever-prying eyes of the media and the public. The vulnerability that shone through in some of her performances, however, suggests glimpses of the real Norma Jeane struggling to escape the confines of her carefully constructed persona.
