1. Consultation and Assessment: The manual emphasizes the importance of a thorough consultation to determine the client's desired color, hair history, and any potential allergies.

3. Preparation: This involves protecting the client's clothing and skin, preparing the appropriate tools (mixing bowls, brushes, etc.), and meticulously measuring out the necessary amounts of color and developer, as specified in the Goldwell color chart and the manual.
4. Mixing and Application: Precise mixing of the color and developer is crucial. The manual clearly outlines the correct ratios for different products and desired results. The application technique varies depending on the desired outcome – all-over color, highlights, balayage, etc. – and the manual provides detailed guidance on each.
5. Processing and Rinsing: The processing time is critical and will vary according to the chosen product and desired results. The manual clearly outlines the specific processing time for each product. Rinsing the hair thoroughly after the processing time is equally important.
