The future of online entertainment hinges on finding a equilibrium between the demand for easy availability and the protection of intellectual property rights. Streaming services like Netflix, Hulu, and Amazon Prime Video represent a viable model, providing authorized access to a wide selection of shows for a fair price. These platforms contribute in the creation of original programming, fostering a viable environment.

The change to a predominantly digital entertainment environment is certain. The problem lies in creating a system that harmonizes the convenience of online streaming with the safeguarding of intellectual property claims, ensuring a flourishing future for both consumers and the industry.
